Section Editor
Anne W. McCammon,
MD, FAAN

Arthur Ginsberg, MD

Address correspondence and reprint requests to Dr. Arthur Ginsberg, P.O. Box 77347, Seattle, WA 98177
arthurginsberg@msn.com

NOW I LAY ME DOWN TO SLEEP

The man from Milan cannot sleep, feels a beast stir inside, strip the meat from his bones, marbled buttocks, sinewy thighs.
Soon he staggers like Lancashire sheep with the cuddy-trots. His pupils shrink small as chiggers, neck cants to the left,
limbs jerk like a marionette, visions of demon-spawn bloom in his head. Each night he sweats buckets of remorse, pleads with Hypnos
the god of repose, to restore the ethereal dances of midnight, the dark-eyed glances and footsteps through silent valleys—the bone-yard of dreams. Deep inside, a perverse origami is afoot, gerrymandering citizens from the left and right. Things fall apart, the handshakes cannot hold. A blood-dimmed tide of anarchy is loosed upon his soul, and he falls through a labyrinth of holes, through a distant mirror into a cave where his ancestors huddle and suck marrow from their elders' bones.

PLASTINATION

Start with a corpse, the bluish monogram of livedo reticularis on its flanks. A whiff of plastic polymer and formalin in the air. A little man wearing a black fedora

Reflections for August

and the hieroglyphs of grandiosity cut into his cheeks,
who promises to resurrect your lover's body, pristine as Amenhotep,
for a thousand years.
Vacuum the fluids and fat, force feed the arteries, like a goose for foie gras, with rubber that glows like neon. Pack the muscles with silicon, inflate
the blanched nipples. Bisect the skull to reveal her brain—a pasha perched
in the minaret of his caliphate—its ruts and ridges
glossy now,
criss-crossed by veins,
as if, the love she lavished on you, was still contained. That little man will slice thin sections of her heart, like ham
on a butcher's blade;
a painting framed
to hang in your mausoleum.
Walk between the stainless steel vats and jars on shelves, filled with bright remains from someone's gutted husk.
Ask yourself if Mozart's music could be any sweeter, had we, his pauper's body to gawk at, in a glass case. Ask the man in the black fedora, why he seeks immortality,
what blinded him,
in the body's geometry,
to the weightlessness of dust.

Neurology[®]

Reflections for August

Arthur Ginsberg

Neurology 2011;77;599

DOI 10.1212/WNL.0b013e318228bf50

This information is current as of August 8, 2011

Updated Information & Services including high resolution figures, can be found at: <http://n.neurology.org/content/77/6/599.full>

Subspecialty Collections

This article, along with others on similar topics, appears in the following collection(s):

Insomnia

<http://n.neurology.org/cgi/collection/insomnia>

Prion disease; see Infections/prion http://n.neurology.org/cgi/collection/prion_disease

Permissions & Licensing

Information about reproducing this article in parts (figures, tables) or in its entirety can be found online at:

http://www.neurology.org/about/about_the_journal#permissions

Reprints

Information about ordering reprints can be found online:

<http://n.neurology.org/subscribers/advertise>

Neurology® is the official journal of the American Academy of Neurology. Published continuously since 1951, it is now a weekly with 48 issues per year. Copyright © 2011 by AAN Enterprises, Inc.. All rights reserved. Print ISSN: 0028-3878. Online ISSN: 1526-632X.